

Raisin Papers Student Name: _____

Introduction names the book, the author, and has a clear and arguable thesis that relates a theme and a character:

4 3 2 1

Body paragraphs each contain relevant quotes that illustrate some aspect of the thesis. Quotes are properly embedded and in context.

4 3 2 1

Conclusion summarizes main points and leaves the reader with something to think about or act upon

4 3 2 1

Paper contains very few errors of capitalization, punctuation, or spelling.

4 3 2 1

See corrections on paper. If you see an "RO" that means run-on sentence. See reverse for strategies to fix those. Please read my notes at the end of your paper. Thank you for your good work.

Raisin Papers Student Name: _____

Introduction names the book, the author, and has a clear and arguable thesis that relates a theme and a character:

4 3 2 1

Body paragraphs each contain relevant quotes that illustrate some aspect of the thesis. Quotes are properly embedded and in context.

4 3 2 1

Conclusion summarizes main points and leaves the reader with something to think about or act upon

4 3 2 1

Paper contains very few errors of capitalization, punctuation, or spelling.

4 3 2 1

See corrections on paper. If you see an "RO" that means run-on sentence. See reverse for strategies to fix those. Please read my notes at the end of your paper. Thank you for your good work.

RO means Run-On

A run-on sentence is when you have multiple sentences joined together into one big super mess of a word jumble. You gotta keep 'em separated.

Example: That house is cool, I like it.

I will edit it like this:

That house is cool, RO I like it.

It is up to you to fix it. Ways to fix it:

1. That house is cool. I like it.
Period. Capitalize.
2. That house is cool, and I like it.
comma plus (and, but, or, so)
3. That house is cool; I like it.
semi-colon (this only works for very closely related ideas)
4. That house is cool; moreover, I like it.
semi-colon plus (however, moreover, furthermore, nevertheless) plus comma

RO means Run-On

A run-on sentence is when you have multiple sentences joined together into one big super mess of a word jumble. You gotta keep 'em separated.

Example: That house is cool, I like it.

I will edit it like this:

That house is cool, RO I like it.

It is up to you to fix it. Ways to fix it:

1. That house is cool. I like it.
Period. Capitalize.
2. That house is cool, and I like it.
comma plus (and, but, or, so)
3. That house is cool; I like it.
semi-colon (this only works for very closely related ideas)
4. That house is cool; moreover, I like it.
semi-colon plus (however, moreover, furthermore, nevertheless) plus comma